

Q Mr. Johnson, do you remember anything in particular about September 14, 1922, or any events which took place on that day?

A No. But, listen, there is something, if you are going to question me any time I ought to mention something to you. I have no knowledge of that day, and if you in court was to ask me a question just like that I would not know how to answer it. If you was to ask me--to make my evidence better, if I can tell you that story you know whatever questions you were to ask me, it would be a lot of help to me.

Q Suppose you go ahead and tell me what you do know.

A Well, I think you will profit from it because I have no knowledge of what night that was. Now, I was on the beach every night due to the fact that I was not working. Now, if I had been working I could have been a lot better witness. I wasn't working on any dates between the 7th of September and the 20th, but I was on the beach afishing I guess every night except Sunday night.

Q Between the 7th and the 20th of September?

A Yes. Now, then, the night the fish was caught--that was the day I know perfectly.

Q Was that a Bass or bluefish? A That was a bluefish.

Q Who caught it? A Arthur Applegate.
